Ministry of Natural Resources employee Dennis Brule supervises as a squirming school of trout slither down the loading ramp for their first, and only, helicopter ride. These fingerlings are only a small part of the 93,000 planted in area lakes by the ministry this past week. For more details on this airborne fish stocking program, see story on page three.

MOE releases lake survey

A report released recently by the Ministry of the Environment shows two lakes in Haliburton County are effectively "dead" because of acid precipitation.

The document names McDonald and Crystal lakes as having zero or negative alkalinity, a condition which arises through the effects of acid precipitation. According to the report, the lakes, which are listed as level 1 out of five levels, may be without fish altogether. The report also states that clam, snail and many amphibian species are probably absent from the two lakes.

The document was compiled by researchers from the Ministry of the Environment, the Ministry of Natural Resources and universities throughout the province. A total of 2,624 lakes were surveyed in the province, 197 of which are in Haliburton county.

The report lists level 2 lakes as being "extremely sensitive" to heavy acid loading. Level 2 lakes have developed very low alkalinity, due to acid precipitation and may therefore suffer fish kills and other biological damage during the spring run-off. Level three lakes are listed as "moderately sensitive" to acid loadings. The report says fish and other aquatic species in level 3 lakes are "generally less at risk in comparison to level 2 lakes." Level 4 lakes are described as having "low sensitivity" to acid precipitation and likely to experience biological damage only under extreme snow-melt conditions during spring run-off. Level 5 lakes, meanwhile, are not sensitive to acid loadings and can withstand spring run-off without biological damage. Level 5 lakes contain sufficient buffering capacity to neutralize acid for an indefinite period.

The report states that lakes in the south-central region of the province are the most susceptible to acid precipitation damage, due to the Problems continue at Cultural Centre

Concern is growing over the leakage of water at the Minden Library and Cultural Centre, and Minden council is now considering options to stop the rotting of foundation timbers.

Bob Herlihey, President of the co-ordinating committee at the Centre, outlined several problems with the building to Minden council at a meeting May 12. Herlihey told council that water seepage around the base of the building is threatening to rot the timbers next to the concrete pad on which the building sits. Herlihey also said that the outside surface of the building, which was treated with pentox a year ago when the building was completed, is now due to be retreated, and that the sawn surface of the structure makes the outside particularly susceptible to moisture.

Herlihey said the cultural centre building has suffered "very heavy shrinkage" to its timbers: "Ordinary timber doesn't shrink much in length," Herlihey told the group, "but this building now has open joints of almost half an inch; it's playing havoc with the heating and insulation." Herlihey added "there are spots where it has pulled away from the grouting to let water in."

Three consultants were asked by the coordinating committee for recommendations to help methods of stopping shrinkage and rotting of the timbers at the centre. Stanhope deputy reeve Elgin Stouffer, who runs an independent sawmill in Stanhope Township, was consulted by Herlihey along with the log home builder Gary Kenney and Alan Rogers of Ontario Hydro, who has also built a log home. Herlihey told council that all three men said the base timbers would rot in eight to ten years unless moves are made to prevent the seepage of water around the building.

The seepage is being caused by the concrete pad which is the foundation of the building. Originally designed and built for a concrete block structure, the pad was then used when Minden council decided to erect the log structure. Because the pad is over-sized for the log building, it allows water to collect around the edge of the building. Efforts have been made to drain away the excess water by cutting channels in the extended section of the cement pad.

According to Herlihey, Stouffer, Kenney and Rogers suggested three basic alterations to the building to stop the leakage:

- the bottom timbers should be coated with pentox, an oil-based compound, and then treated with a heavy oil to seal the timber.

- the logs should then be caulked between the wood and concrete

- the concrete skirt around the building should be paved and graded to prevent water from running towards the foundation timbers.

The three also suggested that holes could be drilled on the inside of the bottom timbers and creosote inserted as another means of protecting the wood against rotting.

According to Minden clerk-treasurer Elinor Burke, Minden council is investigating possible solutions to the seepage problem. Burke said Monday that she has contacted an individual regarding estimates for spraying and recaulking the timbers, and that Reeve Lloyd Walker will establish costs for paving the concrete pad around the building. Burke also said that the routing which was done last year on the foundation pad was successful only to a degree, but was not entirely effective.

Council expects to reach a decision on renovations to the building some time in the coming week.

A representative of the Minden Library-Cultural Centre co-ordinating committee has told council that shrinkage in the logs has caused gaps and the caulking seal to break.

Concentrating on the incoming pitch, Tara Davies of the Minden Hornets takes her turn at the plate during the opening game of the Ladies' Softball League season, Monday evening. The Hornets defeated their opponents from Carnarvon by a 40-13 margin. A schedule of league games for June, July and August can be found on page thirteen.

Tenders called

Plans for the upgrading of Highway 35 between Norland and the intersection with Highway 121 were announced this week by the Ministry of Transportation and Communications.

According to a press release from MTC, tenders are now being called for the work to include resurfacing, grading, drainage, granular base and structure rehabilitation for 11.9 miles.

The announcement stated that the roadway would be resurfaced to bring it up to current design standards. Work will also be carried out on two bridges and at the Minden MTC yards.

The tenders for the project will be opened June 9 at the ministry headquarters in Downsview.

Second meeting cancelled, zoning by-law goes to OMB

While Anson, Hindon and Minden municipal council awaits final revisions to the new draft by-law before an OMB hearing date is set, Reeve Lloyd Walker has decided against a second public meeting on the by-law. The reeve has taken the stand even though some observers say the meeting was promised to ratepayers last year.

At a meeting held April 28, during which extensive revisions to the by-law were made, Minden councillors discussed the possibility of a second meeting. Several councillors suggested the May 24 weekend as an appropriate date, but the matter was left unresolved pending Walker's return from vacation.

According to Minden clerk-treasurer Elinor Burke, Walker considered the matter when he returned and decided against the second meeting. Burke added that a meeting of the Soyer's Lake Cottagers Association, to be held this Sunday at the PineStone Inn, would alleviate any need for a second public meeting, since the bulk of objections to the by-law are from members of the group concerned about the 25 metre shoreline allowances for lots in the R3 zone.

Burke said Minden council has been invited to send representatives to the meeting, and that three councillors will attend.

Reeve Lloyd Walker told The Times Monday that because the by-law has already passed third reading at council, there would be "no point" to a second public meeting on the document. "As far as council is concerned, there's no point to a second public meeting; we've decided to the best of our abilities that the thing is finished," Walker said. He added that a public meeting on the by-law was promised at a meeting of the Soyer's Lake Association last August, but that the meeting was held last fall as promised.

Councillor Lyle McKnight, however, says both he and Walker promised a second meeting at the fall session. "At the first public meeting both Lloyd and I said we'd have another meeting", McKnight said in an interview

Monday. McKnight also said that he was not sure what would be accomplished by another public meeting, since most of the objections received were to the R3 zone, but he added that he had expected Walker to set up the meeting regardless. "Personally, I do feel we need another public meeting on the by-law," McKnight added.

Councillor Ed Pergolas also said he was "pretty sure" Walker had promised a second public meeting at one time. Pergolas added that there would be "a lot of politicking" at the Soyer's Lake meeting this Sunday over the R3 issues. They are a very vocal group, and there are some very informed people in the association," Pergolas said.

Minden council has not formally met to discuss the matter of a second public meeting on the by-law. The issue was not on the agenda of the May 12 meeting.

Minden council has appointed the Toronto consulting firm of Proctor and Redfern to represent the municipality at any OMB hearings on the by-law, however. The decision was reached at the May 12 meeting. Proctor and Redfern have acted as consultants in the preparation of the new draft by-law since work on the document began.

Flying fish of the Highlands

An ancient Chinese speaks of the fish of Yi, a mystical fish which flew 6000 leagues above the earth.

Ninety-three thousand rainbow, brook and lake trout will follow the way of the fish of Yi in coming weeks as the Ministry of Natural Resources begins its annual helicopter fish stocking program in the lakes of Haliburton county. They may not reach the same heights, and they may not grow quite as big, but one MNR biologist Wayne Wilson hopes the results will be as successful on an earthly scale.

Stocking lakes by helicopter seems at first glance to be an expensive exercise, but in fact the ministry gets a very good return for the $380 per hour it costs to rent the Jet Ranger that will drop the fish. "In three days of flying we'll be able to drop 92,900 fish in the Algonquin region; taking in the cost of the helicopter, the cost of fuel and the lodging for the pilot and engineer, that works out to 10¢ a fish," says Wilson, who is overseeing the stocking program from the Minden MNR office this year.

He says six districts in the MNR's Algonquin region will take advantage of helicopter stocking this spring, which will provide 72,000 Brook trout, 7,200 lake trout and 3,700 rainbow trout to lakes that are inaccessible by truck or isolated by private land.

The helicopter becomes particularly effective as the weather gets warmer. "Because trout are cold water fish, it's important to get them in early in the year while lake water is still cool," Wilson says. Stocking lakes by truck requires huge amounts of ice to keep fish cool during transport, and Wilson says the ministry used 450 pounds of ice during Thursday's stocking alone. That's nearly one pound of ice for every pound of fish that the hatchery truck carries in its eight tanks.

The Jet Ranger, which the ministry rents from Lakeland Helicopters Ltd. in Temagami, is equipped with five tanks that can carry a maximum of 9,000 brook and lake trout or 4- to 5 thousand of the larger rainbow yearlings. Once the crew has zeroed in on a target lake, the Jet Ranger is held in hover within a few feet of the lake surface.

The five tanks are then opened by hydraulic levers inside the cabin, dropping the yearling trout into their new habitat with only a slight splash. According to Wilson, the ministry can stock up to five lakes with every helicopter load. He says 20.8 hours flying time will be needed to stock all the lakes in the region, and the 14 lakes - Anson, Havelock, Johnson, Kelly, Sheldon, Doe, Little Otter, Horn, Little East, Otter Head, Round, Wylies, Spar and Lost - in the Minden district will be handled in one day.

Growing problem

In many ways the stocking program is a race against time. As the summer approaches, the rush is on to get the trout into the lakes while the water temperatures are low. "The sooner we get the fish into the lakes in the spring, the more efficient the program will be," Wilson says. "The longer hatcheries hold the trout, the more food they'll eat, because their growth rate goes way up as the temperatures increase," he says. And as they grow, the trucks and the helicopter can carry fewer fish. Wilson says the entire stocking program can be carried out in the Minden district in five days - three for lake trout, one for brook trout and one day for rainbow - but the demand for equipment from the two hatcheries that supply the fish makes a long wait inevitable. "We could do it all in a week," Wilson explains, "but we're standing in line like the rest of the districts." The two hatcheries at Pembroke and Skeleton Lake supply three specially equipped three ton trucks to all district MNR offices in the Algonquin region; Minden also uses half-ton pick ups fitted with two tanks that can carry a total of 4,000 lake and brook trout. This year the hatchery trucks will serve the Algonquin region and Temagami as well, so the line is even longer than usual.

Most of the fish used in the stocking program in the Algonquin region will be yearling brook and lake trout, a choice that is dictated again by the economies of the project. Two year old fish are generally dropped only in lakes with significant bass or perch population. The larger trout are used to prevent predation by other species, but only 12,000 two year olds will be dropped in nine lakes this year, compared to 80,900 that will find homes in another 40 lakes being stocked in Algonquin. "It costs nearly four times as much to produce a two year old fish as opposed to a yearling," Wilson points out. "They take up more space at the hatchery and they eat more, so in general it cuts the hatcheries' productivity to almost one tenth of what it would be if the fish left as yearlings," he explains.

Seven categories

Every lake stocked by the MNR is stocked with a specific purpose in mind, and the fish and wildlife biologists have estimated seven categories - A to G - as a guide to the objectives of the program. The majority of lakes fall under category 'A'; "Rehabilitation to establish a naturally reproducing population." Other lakes meanwhile will be stocked for special study and assessment purposes, which amounts to experimentation to determine a lake's suitability to a particular

Dichotomy

The irony of man's interference with nature is obvious in two articles appearing in this week's edition of The Times.

One is positive. The Ministry of Natural Resources has just completed a fish planting program with the aid of a helicopter to reach isolated lakes. 14,250 fingerlings were dropped in 14 area lakes from the specially equipped Jet Ranger helicopter. On the ground, ministry personnel have jockeyed with representatives from other districts to obtain their supply of young fish from the two hatcheries. Exact timetables were established to ensure the supply trucks and expensive helicopter service were co-ordinated. 450 pounds of ice were used Thursday to ensure the fingerlings were kept in peak condition at the proper temperature prior to being placed in the lakes. Similar efforts are now being expended to plant fish in lakes and rivers that can easily be reached by road.

Planting fish can be classified as interfering with nature, but it is being carried out with a positive attitude about the future. The carefully placed fish will help replenish the natural stock of the river or lake, provide food for other fish and wild life and give the angler something to catch.

The other article is negative. The Ministry of Environment has just released its most recent acid lake sensitivity survey. The findings are not encouraging.

The fish planting efforts of MNR reach 14 lakes, four of these were listed in the MOE acid stress survey. Anson, Havelock, Johnson and Kelly lakes were all graded at level two. According to the MOE press release, these lakes "have very low alkalinity and are extremely sensitive to heavy acid loading. Fishing kills and other biological damage may occur during the spring run-off".

We applaud the Ministry of Natural Resources in its effort to plan for the future by replenishing area fish stocks. However, the individuals who devote a great deal of their time to ensuring the fingerlings make it safely and quickly from the hatchery to the lake must be becoming increasingly discouraged as more lakes fall prey to the impact of acidified precipitation.

The acid rain problem has not left us, even though it may not dominate the news like it once did. And, chances are in a couple of years the fish planting program will have to be reassessed in light of the growing problem created by acid rain. The solution is obvious however, the current effort put forward to reach that goal by both senior levels of government have yet to have any measurable impact.

By levying a tax on labour for such things as auto and television repair, Frank Miller is effectively making everyone in the province a tax collector!

Let me concentrate on some areas of particular concern:

The Miller budget has even taken to taxing the children of Ontario to finance his government's misdirected handling of the provincial economy.

This is a short-term stand-still budget that fails to deal with most problems in the short-term, let alone the long-term. Our economic problems are structural, not cyclical. They will not be solved by bandaid make-work projects.

There is virtually no assistance extended to people threatened with the loss of their homes and farms. Elderly persons on fixed incomes are offered no help as they see costs spiral upward. Middle-aged workers, idled by plant closures and job obsolescence, can draw no hope that retraining will make their future more secure.

We have consistently argued that if the Conservative government had been committed to policies which cut wasteful spending - such as pointless investment in SUNCOR, unproductive accumulation of landbanks, spending on opinion polls and advertising to create illusions of action - there would be no need for either tax increases or further increases in the deficit.

Mr. Miller, however, has taken both steps - to the point of even taxing the kids' candy bars - and his fiscal irresponsibility must be roundly condemned.

With the increase in individual OHIP premiums, added to the increase of 2 per cent in the provincial income tax announced last year, the effective rate of personal income tax has soared to about 60 per cent of the federal level.

This Budget will result in an increase in the cost of servicing the provincial debt to almost $6 million a day. Perhaps better than any other figure, this demonstrates how Mr. Miller and the Premier have been mismanaging the provincial economy in recent years.

I must applaud the two-year elimination of the Small Business Corporate Income Tax, which in saving entrepreneurs $250 million in the coming year, should provide a buffer against the hardened economic realities of our times. Hopefully, it will enable more small businesses to survive to provide jobs for our people and a measure of optimism for economic recovery in Ontario.

Farm assistance

Tile drainage assistance is being increased 26 per cent, but due to underfunding in recent years, is still 40 per cent below the needed level. Municipalities need $50 million to meet commitments to farmers. This year, only $30 million is allotted.

The Farmstead Improvement Scheme is a joke. All too many farmers haven't the cash to put in crops, let alone paint barns. What troubled farmers need now is a means for survival, not a scheme to window-dress their precarious operations.

Some contradictions

The Davis government has told municipalities to exercise restraint, but the Miller Budget begins taxing building materials purchased by municipalities and other public bodies.

The government has encouraged drivers to take to small cars to conserve energy, but will now charge equal registration fees with big car operators.

A professed concern of the Davis government is that we "Preserve It, Conserve It", but taxes insulation, wind deflectors on trucks and storm doors.

The Treasurer cuts taxation on accommodations from seven to five per cent, but levies a tax on items such as toiletries and tissue goods, which will increase the cost of staying in a hotel room.

Hard economic times have forced many families to keep second-hand cars on the road. Now those costly repairs will head higher as labour is taxed.

The Ontario government has been quick to criticise Ottawa for its failure to keep pace with inflation in the area of education and health care spending, yet Mr. Miller serves notice "to all recipients of provincial funds that they should not count on future funding at or above inflation rates."

The Tory budget is a stand-still budget. The Treasurer had said before the budget that he had very little room in which to move. Well, he proved it. He hasn't moved at all.

This is the sad conclusion that must be drawn from Miller's May 13 budget, which will hurt everyone, while helping few. Thanks to Mr. Miller, Friday the thirteenth arrived a day early this month.

United Church celebrates 120th anniversary

This week The United Church celebrates the arrival of the first Methodist minister in Minden, 120 years ago, and a look at the early records of the Minden Mission reveals a vivid portrait of the settlement in its first days and the zeal of the early pioneers.

The history of the United Church and the settling of the Highlands have run a common course. Since the arrival of the first Methodist minister in 1862 and the construction of the first church in 1865, prosperity has come gradually to both the church and the community. The early loggers, who came to harvest white pine for the masts of the British fleet, lent their hands to the task of raising churches as well, and they shaped their village and their faith side by side.

Minden's first resident minister, Reverend William Sheridan of the Methodist Church, arrived in the tiny settlement, then called Gull River, in 1862. Sheridan performed the first marriage in the community that same year, and began the long campaign to establish a church in the village. Sheridan and the ministers who followed him found a congregation more than willing to work hard toward a church of their own, and by 1865 the early settlers had raised the $340 it cost to erect the first church in Minden. By the end of the decade five religious faiths were represented in Minden, many of them sharing the first Methodist church that Sheridan's zeal had begun; in 1864 a Free Presbyterian church was erected, one year before the Wesleyan Methodists completed their church. The clergies of both the Church of England and the Anglican Church used the first Methodist church for their services in Minden, and in the early part of the decade the Bible Christian church was also represented in the town.

United Church Archive records reveal a remarkable portrait of early Minden. Reverend Sheridan found conditions in Minden so impoverished that food for his horse was not to be found. He conducted his first services in the cabins of the first pioneers, travelling from one to another on foot. Reverend William Short, who came to Minden when Sheridan's one year stay ended, described the Minden Mission this way:

"Minden is a specimen of first progress in a rugged course. This mission is very much cut up by rivers, lakes, mountains, hills, ledges of rocks and swamps; consequently much hard travelling has to be done. The members live far apart in five townships, and some of them have preaching only once a month". It was also a time when ministers were paid by the kindness of their brethren's donation. Short's report says the Mission raised $60 toward his support, and an additional $37 on behalf of the Missionary fund. At that time the Methodist church had 24 full members, and, as Short described it, 16 on trial.

The early Minden Mission consisted of Minden, Snowdon, Anson, Lutterworth and Stanhope townships, and by 1881 the Methodist Register listed members in Minden, Gelert, Providence, Bethel, Straffords, Bethany, Lindops, Cooks, Boshkung, Lutterworth and Austin's Narrows. Reverend Sheridan found the Mission so vast he applied for an assistant soon after his arrival, and in December of 1862 Reverend Hardie arrived to begin work in the southern region of the mission. Reverend Sheridan's early writings describe the challenge that Minden Mission had presented:

"It was impossible for me to be much amongst them, or to preach often to them; having to work such a vast field, and being compelled for want of horse feed to travel on foot... To see the whole Mission worked thoroughly I applied, in the fall, for an assistant. In the beginning of December, Brother Alexander Hardie was sent to work in the two southern townships, leaving all north of the ridge to me. This arrangement was made in order to save unnecessary travelling and to enable Brother Hardie to give some of his time to the Bobcaygeon Mission. Thus relieved, and being able again to keep my horse, I immediately added three new appointments to my plan, and began to preach more often at each of the old ones. Since then the work has gone on, and the congregation has been constantly growing".

While the Mission grew, new churches sprang up throughout the area. Three years after the Minden Methodist church was completed, a Wesleyan Methodist church was erected on the Burnt River in Snowdon. The Methodists raised a church at what was then called Austin's Narrows; it still stands near the bridge in Ingoldsby.

But even with a church established many settlements had no housing to offer a permanent minister. In Minden a drive to raise funds for a parsonage was begun in October, 1873 by Reverend W. Craig, under whose direction the project was soon completed. Craig wrote of his arrival at his new charge:

"My first thought on reaching Minden was the great need of a parsonage, that these splendid people might have an ordained minister on their field, one who could baptize and perform marriages. The year before they had a good man by the name of Maudsly who had a jem of a little pony, and his aim was "a stable for Molly". So he succeeded in getting the people to deliver a foundation for the stable. I was told the story about Brother Maudsly and Molly and the stable. The first thing I did was to measure my brother bachelor's timber and found that the timber would answer for a parsonage, and had the very great satisfaction of seeing the walls enclosed and the roof on. So pleased were these good people that nothing would do but I must get ordained and married and occupy the Minden parsonage, but a very kind Providence had another field in view for me, where I would have more time to study."

The building boom soon hit Haliburton as well. A report by a G. Puffer in the fishery, be it lake, brook or trout. These lakes are watched carefully through surveys each year to determine the success or failure of the stock.

Many other lakes are stocked with "put and take" in mind; these waters usually receive rainbow species, which mature quickly and are ready for anglers by the fall after stocking in the spring. Another category is the "put and delay take", which usually uses lake trout that are intended to be caught in three years after they are placed.

While both bass and muskie were at one time stocked in Haliburton lakes, biologists have now found that bass fisheries exist in most area lakes now, and the demand and the supply of muskies, which are better suited to the shallow, warm lakes in the Kawarthas, has diminished over the years. Muskie are now stocked only to introduce the species to a given lake, not to keep up a constant population level.

When anglers take to the lakes this summer and fall, they can thank any success, at least partly to their tax dollars. And if they don't come back with a fish of Yi on their stringer, they can be assured that the work of the MNR gives some credence to an ancient and honourable fish story.

Thespians tender theatrical triumph

"Memories...memories..." the words of that well-known golden oldie brought the audience back to reality at the close of the sixth production of Highlands Little Theatre, 'Lily the Felon's Daughter.' The patrons had been transported to a bygone era of gaslight, spats, French maids, suffragettes and villains by the excellent performances given by the cast last week in the High School auditorium.

The melodrama was played rather tongue-in-cheek by the group who entered into their roles wholeheartedly, making the audience part of the entertainment by encouraging us to boo the villains and cheer the virtuous.

In act one, the virginal (but slightly vacant) heroine Lily, magnificently played by Bonnie Fitzgerald, is seen as the adored adopted daughter of Jonas and Betsy Fairweather, ably played by Jim Andrews and Betty Perugino. We find that shortly after Lily's adoption, Jonas and Betsy are blessed by the arrival of a son, Compton, adored by all and spoiled by his doting parents.

Compton however, is a shallow, weak soul, easily led astray and David Swail's performance as a supercilious brat in whom one can detect a glimmer of good, was excellent. (He is weak - not bad.) His friend, Craven Sinclair (boo, hiss) finds it easy to lead Compton into evil ways. Dale McConnell gave us a slimy, perfidious (but nonetheless hilarious) Craven - another excellent performance. The audience found it easy to dislike the villain and didn't even wait for the musical cue from the orchestra to hiss and boo. At this point, it should be mentioned that the orchestra, Melissa Stephens, did a grand job and deserved the applause accorded her at the end of the show.

We also met Miss Ophelia, a maiden lady of uncertain age but definite views who marches onstage in her bloomers (shocking poor Betsy and Lily) and flaunting a Votes for Women sash.

Brenda Ellis outdid previous performances in her portrayal of this early women's libber. Ophelia has a suitor whom she treats with great disdain, but then that would be very easy - Lord Montmorency - Curtis Eastmure - leaves the audience helpless with hilarity. He is "absolutely splendid dontcha know." Eastmure's foppish, vacuous, English aristocrat is a joy to behold and a pleasure to listen to.

The other villain who appears in this act is Robin Steele, a felon, who enters homes on the pretext of selling a little dog - hoping to pick up a bit of loot. The part of Robin was shared by Heather Scully and Dan Ratcliffe, both of whom did a super job, considering they had to share the limelight with the "leetle dawgie" - Chip, a beautiful spaniel who not only stole the scene but almost the whole show when, during Robin's song, not only behaved impeccably, but wagged his little tail right on cue much to the delight of the audience.

In the second act, the night of the soiree when Compton and Lily's engagement is about to be announced, we are treated to a display of pettiness and panic by Compton when it is revealed his wicked ways (engineered of course by Craven) have led him to forgery and embezzlement from his employer Mrs. Kingsley. Caryl Douglas' slightly vulgar but honest and true Mrs. Kingsley finds it difficult but has to report Compton's crime to the police. Jonas, poor, misguided, doting father, allows himself to be blamed and the scene draws to a close with Compton fleeing and poor Lily discovering she is the child of the felon Robin Steele. It is also discovered that a large sum of money is missing and Lily, assuming Compton took it in his flight, confesses to that crime - (very dramatically one might add.)

Act three opens to a vastly different mode of living for the Fairweathers. They are barely managing to eke out a living on the few pennies Lily earns as a seamstress. Jonas has returned from gaol and Robin tries to lead him to the demon drink (a most amusing portrayal by Jim Andrews.) Betsy, meanwhile, has taken to her bed in a deep decline over the loss of her beloved son and her rich life and the loss of her French maid (well played by Maryanne Helsby.) The family is renting a room in their old home now owned by a coarse slattern, Mrs. Bloodgood - Caryl Douglas again demonstrates her versatility in showing the landlady as a moneygrubbing vulgar wretch who threatens to throw all of them into the street if the rent is not forthcoming immediately.

We meet again Miss Ophelia who has joined the Salvation Army and is on a short visit. We discover she has not seen or heard from Lord Monty since that fateful night when Compton flew the coop. We are also treated to a scene between the black-hearted Craven and the still pure Lily, in which he offers to take her away from the misery and poverty and tells her, (gasp), that her long-lost

Compton is married to an Indian maiden in far-off California. Although her heart is broken, we hear the classic line "No, No, a thousand times No, I'd rather die than say Yes!!!" (Worth seeing the play for that line alone.)

Mrs. Bloodgood enters the scene followed by her latest tenant (strangely moustachioed and cloaked - guess who?) The stranger cannot bear the poverty and deprivation he sees and reveals himself dramatically as (surprise, surprise) the long-lost (but now rich and honest) Compton. Betsy's decline is over immediately and when Compton asks his "friend" Craven (boo, hiss) why the money he sent from California on his way to the gold fields was not passed on, Craven shows his true colours and on being accused by Robin Steele who saw him steal the money from Betsy's moneybox, pulls a gun and using Lily as a shield, makes for the door. At that point an apparition in furs and showshoes - Lord Monty - enters, promptly takes in the situation and beans Craven with a bag of gold, thus saving the day and ingratiating himself once again with Ophelia.

Explanations and apologies are forthcoming from Compton, he is returned to the bosom of his family (and to that of the buxom Lily), the villain is caught and everyone lives happily ever after.

Congratulations to Lila Mitchell and Dan Ratcliffe for a directing job well done. The sets, costumes and special effects were also excellent. A word of praise to Nancy Adamson and the tireless group of members who did such an excellent job.

Once again, a most entertaining and diverting evening. We are proud of the Highlands Little Theatre group - long may they continue.

The first minister visited the Minden area on horseback, travelling a dusty trail from Bobcaygeon (from page 5)

Christian Guardian of March 1874 says "Our people at Haliburton are determined to build a church this coming summer. They are getting everything ready to commence work as soon as spring opens. They had intended to build one worth $400, but through the energies of our young pastor, the Reverend John Henderson, they now intend to raise one worth $600, he having gone to his former vicinity and obtained $50 for their benefit. Haliburton is to be separated from the Minden Mission next Conference and it is their intention to make it a separate Mission."

The building of the Zion church in Carnarvon was typical of the community spirit that went into the construction of all the early churches. In January 1891 members of the Methodist charge in Carnarvon decided a place of worship was needed. Many teas and concerts were held throughout that winter to raise money for the project, and the minutes of one such gathering, held in February of that year, tell of residents travelling in eight inches of slush and water to attend a concert at the home of a Mrs. Damien, which is now the site of the Moorefield Acres. Bees were held to cut logs for the church and move them to the mill at Bucks Slide. In May of 1891 work on the church was stalled by bush fires; labourers were forced to leave their work to fight the blazes. Louis McDonald was then hired to finish the inside of the church for a fee of $45, helping to complete the outside of the building as well for half of his usual wages. The bush fires of the early summer were brought under control in time for the roof to be finished that summer.

So wrote the Reverend Francis Johnson of Minden in 1878, and the prosperity of the United Church is just as obvious today. The Maple Lake United Church came to that community in 1901; a volunteer committee and $250 got the project underway. In January 1926 the present Minden church was dedicated in a ceremony begun with the ringing of the bell by both Presbyterian and Methodist ministers. In 1958, a $50,000 addition was planned, and the new wing, which nearly doubled the size of the church, was dedicated one year later in a May 24 ceremony. Modern day building brought a new ceremony to the church: mortgage burning services were held twice at the Minden United Church to mark the end of the mortgage on the construction of the church on May 24, 1963 and the final payments on the 1958 addition.

This week churches in Carnarvon, Maple Lake and Minden are holding more conventional services to mark the 120th anniversary of Reverend Sheridan's arrival. Services will be held at all three United Churches in the Minden charge, and a programme of organ music will be performed Sunday evening by Gordon Fleming, a celebrated church organist from Toronto. The United church will mark the occasion with the release of its historical booklet, "Minden Mission" which will be available at all three churches during the special anniversary services.

Councils endorse housing executive

Both Stanhope and Anson, Hindon and Minden councils have given their approval to the new executive of the Joint Municipal Non-Profit Housing Corporation and it is expected that Lutterworth council will approve the four man group at its meeting April 20.

Minden councillor Ed Pergolas has been named chairman of the Corporation's executive. Lutterworth councillor Bill Prentice will serve as vice-chairman, Al Mayo, "manager of the Toronto-Dominion bank in Minden, will be treasurer and Stanhope clerk-treasurer Gerald Bain will act as secretary to the organization.

Other appointments to the group include Stanhope Reeve Jim Harrison, Minden lawyer Donald Finn, real estate salesman Alf Wickens, retired contractor Tony Samarillo and Minden councillor Larry Cummins.

Both Minden and Stanhope councils have also passed motions giving their approval to the two names which have been suggested for the corporation. "Staamworth" and "Staanworth" were recommended by the executive as representing the three municipalities involved in the project. Corporation members also hope that the name will meet with easy approval during incorporation proceedings, since it is not common.

Stanhope councillors also submitted two additional names to the executive for consideration: Stanhope has recommended both "Stanham-worth" and "Hope-ham-worth" as possible titles for the organization. Lutterworth council will review the two names submitted by the executive at its Thursday meeting before giving its approval.

According to executive secretary Gerald Bain, the corporation will meet June 2 to make a final decision on the name and begin the process of incorporation.

Members of the group, meanwhile, have made application to the Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Housing, the ministry which administers the non-profit housing program, for an incentive grant to cover the initial cost of the project, which will bring 30 geared to income housing units to the Minden area, providing housing for both seniors and families.

Hunter injured in mishap

An American hunter was wounded Thursday in Monmouth township when his hunting partner and supposed "friend" accidentally discharged a rifle into the open tailgate of their jeep.

43 year old John Ormsby of Niagara Falls, New York, was hit in the calf and torso by fragments of a 30:30 shell that shattered against the roll bar of the vehicle. He was taken to Haliburton Red Cross hospital and later transferred to the Civic Hospital in Peterborough, where his wounds were diagnosed as minor.

Ormsby was hunting with a group of four men from the Niagara Falls area when the incident occurred. The four hunters returned to their jeep at 11:30 Thursday morning, parked on the Harlington road in Monmouth township.

Ormsby and two others were waiting in the vehicle while

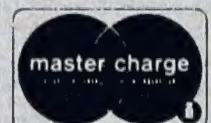

Joseph Teixeira unloaded the 30:30 rifle and attempted to place it in its case. The gun then discharged through the rear of the jeep after striking the roll bar, the main part of the shell entered Ormsby's calf and smaller fragments sprayed the man in the right

According to investigating officer Brian Dunham, the four hunters were checking baits that had been left out in the area when the incident occurred.

Teixeira removed the clip from his rifle, then pulled the trigger to release pressure without realizing he had already chambered a shell in the rifle.

Ormsby was taken to Haliburton Red Cross by the owner of Elephant Lodge, and then moved to Peterborough where he underwent surgery to remove shrapnel from his right side and thigh.

Farmer fells rabid fox with axe

A rabid fox killed on a Lutterworth farm last week marked the fortieth incidence of the disease in the Haliburton/Victoria area since October, and while officials at the Ministry of Agriculture in Peterborough say the number is significantly higher than usual, the events surrounding the fox's demise were as curious as the disease itself.

Ingram Wessell of Lutterworth township was leaving his farm at noon last week when he noticed the fox standing on a large rock near his herd of cattle. "We have thirty head here and I didn't actually see the fox bite any of them, but he was jumping and snapping," Wessell says. "I thought it was strange to see a fox in broad daylight like that, and he didn't seem afraid at all. Then he did a complete somersault off the rock and I knew something was funny," he explains. By the time Wessell could go for a rifle, though, the fox had disappeared.

Later that day the fox reappeared in the farm yard. "Sometime that evening my boys were out in the yard and the fox showed up around the manure pile," Wessell says. "I went for the rifle again but my wife had put the shells away and I couldn't find a thing. Clayton Cameron - he's my hired man - grabbed an axe and we tracked him down to the ditch," Wessell explains.

He says the animal was very weak and slow. "He was so sick he was wobbling. Clayton had no trouble keeping up with him, and we just hit him across the back with the axe and that was it." Wessell also says the animal had a nose full of porcupine quills.

Dr. C.E. Benn of the Animal Health branch of the Ministry of Agriculture says the incidence of rabies has been high since October, but has slowed down considerably in recent months. "From October to December last year we had ten confirmed cases in the Norland/Cobocok area," Benn says. "Since January we've had only four cases in northern Victoria county and three in Halibur-ton." Benn says that the incidence of rabies generally drops as the animal population does. "The disease runs its course", Benn explains. "The wildlife population in the county has increased and we're finding more cases, but it seems to have reduced somewhat since last fall."

Benn adds that fox and skunks are the main carriers of the disease. According to his figures, thirteen foxes and twelve skunks accounted for twenty-five of thirty-seven cases of rabies in Victoria County since October.

Board appoints business administrator

The Haliburton Board of Education has announced the appointment of a new business administrator.

Stanley Baker of Aurora, Ontario has been named to the post, which he will take up on August 1 of this year. The appointment was made at a special meeting of the Haliburton Board held May 6. He will be replacing James Leworthy, who resigned in December.

Baker is a former secretary-treasurer and business administrator for the Aurora and District High School Board and a Senior Official and Supervisory Officer for the York County Board of Education.

He has also overseen accounting for a private corporation.

Mr. Baker has been a summer resident of Haliburton County for the past twenty years. He and his wife will now take up residence at their home on Kashagawigamog Lake.

The money will go towards hiring students under the Summer Canada Student Employment Program.

It is also hoped that a merry-go-round, slide and a main playing apparatus will be installed this summer.

increased acid load in the atmosphere in that area of the province. The south-central region includes lakes in Muskoka, Haliburton, Parry Sound, Algonquin Park and parts of Manitoulin and Temiskaming.

The report shows 29% of lakes in Haliburton county have reached a point where they are "extremely sensitive" to acid loading. The 57 lakes listed as level 2 include lakes in the northern part of the county.

Most of the lakes in the county - 45% - are shown to be at level 3 in the report. These 84 lakes include such popular vacation lakes as Boshkung, Halls, Kushog and Twelve Mile.

Kashagawigamog, Mountain and Soyers' lakes are all listed in the report as level 4, which includes 31 lakes or 16% of those lakes tested in the county.

On Tuesday, May 11 the Haliburton County Farmers' Association held its monthly meeting at the Stanhope library. The subject for discussion was the nutritional requirements of plants, be they field or pasture crops, or garden produce.

Agricultural Representative Carm Hamilton opened the session with an over view of basic requirements for plant life, including the important harmony of air, sunshine and water to the growth and development of our crops.

For example, many of us overlook the importance of soil aeration, yet without sufficient oxygen present in the soil, organisms, which break-down organic matter and thus provide some of the nutritional elements, fail to thrive.

Mr. Hamilton went on to describe the composition of soil as well as the nutritional necessities for plant life which should be present in your soil. Included in the discussion, besides the three basic requirements of nitrogen, phosphorous, and potassium, were the many trace elements/minerals, without which certain health problems may arise in livestock.

Carm Hamilton went on to point out some of the general deficiencies and overabundances of these elements/minerals which occur in Haliburton soil. Clearly the importance for the farmer of soil testing was indicated, and again this year for members of the Association, soil tests will be conducted Wednesday, June 2. For those interested, time is running out, you should contact Dwain Wruth no later than Friday May 28.

The key-note of this meeting however was a look at the potential for using sewage sludge as a substitute for more conventional fertilizers on fields and pasture.

Officials from the Ministry of the Environment were present to outline some of the strict guidelines to the use and application of the sludge to productive farmland. The guidelines were reassuring to most that great care is taken to ensure the continued health of individuals and the safety surrounding ecological and environmental concerns resulting from the use of this human by-product. After all, hasn't China pursued this same program for thousands of years?

Where the program is deficient was the economic realities, given the lack of quantitative amounts of nutritional content for the soil and the overall cost factor, taking into consideration the cost to the farmer, who must come to terms with the individuals contracted to transport the sludge.

This program is run in conjunction with the Ministry of the Environment, Gravenhurst, and the Ministry of Agriculture and Food, Lindsay. For further information contact officials at those offices.

June 15 has tentatively been set aside for next month's meeting, at which time a "walkalong" some of your neighbour's farmland is planned. To the general public: spurred - on by last year's success, the Association's executive is enthusiastically planning another day "down-on-the-farm" for this summer. Watch this column as well as ads in your local paper for time and place.

Keep those blackflies starved!

Special status for park

Anson, Hindon and Minden municipal council has passed a by-law which will establish the Minden Wild Water Preserve as an "Approved Park" once the move is ratified by the Ministry of Natural Resources.

According to a program of the provincial government, parks fronting on water can be designated as "Approved Parks" and so become eligible for improvement grants from the Ontario government. If the MNR gives its approval to the by-law, any work carried out at the preserve, situated south of Horseshoe Lake on the Gull River, will be eligible for 50% funding from the province.

The Wild Water Preserve will join four other parks in the townships of Anson, Hindon and Minden which have been designated "Approved". The Minden Park at the Minden arena, the old Curling club and the Rotary Park are all under the program, as are the banks of the Gull River from the Minden bridge to the park at Austin's Esso.

Minden clerk-treasurer Elinor Burke says the move will help fund the many improvements that are made to the area: "The Wild Water people use the park a lot and have done a lot of work on it," Burke said. "The 'Approved Park' program will provide funding for any work the municipality plans there for the future."

SHOCK TALK

Sailing safely through summer means watching for overhead powerlines.

When you're launching your boat or when it's on the water, don't make the fatal mistake of letting the boat's mast or antenna touch overhead wires.

It could knock the wind out of your sails, forever.

Your safety is our concern.

Seniors end bowling season

The Golden Age Monday and Friday bowling leagues wound up their 1981 - 82 season May 7 with a club banquet at the Gelert Gardens. Organizers deem the banquet a success, as nearly eighty people attended.

Winners of the Monday league this year was the incomparable Budgies team, a hard bowling group made up of Nancy Moore, John James, Helen Stott, Doris Craig, Luther Wilson and Agnes Taylor.

The Cuckoos meanwhile scooped up first place in the Friday league. Despite their name, The Cuckoos turned in some serious bowling to take the league title this year. This year's Cuckoos were Evelyn Lucas, Dick Cummings, Florence Lindsay, Bill O'Brien and Fran Clark.

It's lovely this time of year here at Hyland Crest, when you can get outside to get fresh air to give you pep and zest. From our bedroom window we have a lovely view. We can see our Minden town, and across to Pike's Peak too. The leaves are forming on the wooded hills. There are all kinds of wild flowers, including daffodils.

Service in the chapel Sunday night was really quite fine. Jesus and his mother attending the wedding in Cana. Jesus turned the water into wine. We always like Rev. Burgess's talks. He is so sincere.

Watched two interesting movies Monday night. "Shannon" and "Henry Ford" from the time he started to make tin lizzies until he made them right.

Tuesday morning Rev. Wicks of Minden Gospel Church held the service, this lovely morning in May. He took his text from the one hundred and thirty ninth psalm - "God knows everything", whatever you do or say He knows it by the way. Then Tuesday night, instead of Payne, Deacon and Crowe, Fred Ballard came and put on a real good show.

Now I would like to pay tribute to our Millie Wood. Whatever she does, she does it real good. She fixed all our song books that needed repair, and she does most of this from her wheel chair.

Ladies in craft room, working real hard, making different kinds of things, and afghans by the yard.

Wednesday night is games night. We were beaten by Welch and Blears. I felt so badly, I shed some tears.

The U.C.W. Ladies from Carnarvon put on the tea party this lovely May day. We knew everyone of them for we lived up that way. It was so nice to see old friends again who live up thirty-five and the weather is so beautiful it is good to be alive.

Millie Wood's granddaughter is getting married on the fifteenth day of May. I don't know the groom's last name - Millie didn't say. But I do know his first name is Peter. We hope they will be happy, and he'll know how to treat her.

Bingo was put on Thursday night by Thomas and Crowe. They were from the Kinsman Club, and did the job just so.

It was sing-song time again this Friday afternoon. Grace Coburn led the singing and Norma played the tunes. Grace always has a couple of humorous poems, one - "When Father shook the stove". She also sang "Danny Boy", which was really fine. We thank you both for coming and giving of your time.
